Bottle: 16.7

13.5% VOL.

100% Tempranillo Lovely ruby-red with medium depth of colour and slight brick-red hues. Great aromatic intensity on the nose, with ripe fruit well integrated with the toasted oak and balsamic aromas from the cask. The aftertaste is long and lingering, recalling reminders of toasted wood and dried fruits.

ENRIQUE MENDOZA SANTA ROSA · ENRIQUE MENDOZA (D.O ALICANTE, SPAIN)

250ml: 12.5
Bottle: 33

14.0% VOL.

Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot and Syrah High layer wine. Intense ruby red color with tile flashes acquired during its aging.

In the olfactory phase it is very mineral, with hints of graphite, humus, black stones and freshly tilled earth, these mineral aromas are finely intertwined with spicy, balsamic and floral notes such as violet.

On the palate it is a very balanced wine, combining power and elegance with a firm tannic load in the center of the mouth, without concentrations or aggressiveness.

The aftertaste is wide and harmonious, returning again to the smoked and toasted notes acquired by its time in the barrel.

CABERNET SAUVIGNON

THE PROFILE OF CABERNET SAUVIGNON

The classic profile of Cabernet Sauvignon tends to be full-bodied wines with high tannins and noticeable acidity that contributes to the wine's aging potential. In cooler climates, Cabernet Sauvignon tends to produce wines with blackcurrant notes that can be accompanied by green bell pepper notes, mint and cedar which will all become more pronounced as the wine ages. In more moderate climates the black currant notes are often seen with black cherry and black olive notes while in very hot climates the currant flavours can veer towards the over-ripe and "jammy" side. In parts of Australia, particularly the Coonawarra wine region of South Australia, Cabernet Sauvignon wines tend to have characteristic eucalyptus or menthol notes.

GARNACHA

THE PROFILE OF GARNACHA

Garnacha is one of the most widely planted red wine grape varieties in the world. It ripens late, so it needs hot, dry conditions such as those found in Spain, where the grape most likely originated. It is also grown in the Italian island of Sardinia, the south of France, Australia, and California's Monterey AVA and San Joaquin Valley.

It is generally spicy, berry-flavoured and soft on the palate and produces wine with a relatively high alcohol content, but it needs careful control of yields for best results. Characteristic flavour profiles on Grenache include red fruit flavours (raspberry and strawberry) with a subtle, white pepper spice note. Grenache wines are highly prone to oxidation, with even young examples having the potential to show browning (or "bricking") coloration that can be noticed around the rim when evaluating the wine at an angle in the glass. As Grenache ages the wines tend to take on more leather and tar flavours.

MONASTRELL

THE PROFILE OF MONASTRELL

Mourvedre (Monastrell in its native Spain, Mataro in Australia and California) is a black-skinned variety that has been grown in vineyards all around the western Mediterranean for centuries.

Thought to have originated in Spain, it is now grown extensively throughout the Iberian Peninsula, southern France, California and South Australia.

Mourvedre likes warm, dry climates and has small, thick-skinned berries – the textbook combination for making wines with intense color and high tannin levels. In fact, it is the variety's mouth-drying tannins that earned it the French nickname Etrangle-Chien (the dog strangler).

Mourvedre's meaty, herby aromas are very distinctive, as are its strong tannins. These qualities make it a potent ingredient for blending, most often with vibrant, rich Grenache and structured, spicy Syrah.

PETIT VERDOT

THE PROFILE OF PETIT VERDOT

Petit Verdot is a red wine grape whose small, thick-skinned berries are valued for their depth of color. Traditionally, the variety played a small role in the classic blends of Bordeaux. However, varietal Petit Verdot has now appeared in many regions of southern Europe, the Americas and Australia.

Petit Verdot has a less well known but larger-berried cousin, Gros Verdot. Verdot roughly translates as "green one" and reflects the variety's propensity to under ripeness. Therefore, in cool seasons Petit Verdot vines produce bunches speckled with green, unripened berries. Petit Verdot wines tend to have a dense, violet-black appearance due to the high levels of anthocyanins in the berry's thick skins. They also have high tannin levels, thanks to the small berries creating a high ratio of skin and seeds to juice.

TEMPRANILLO

THE PROFILE OF TEMPRANILLO

Tempranillo is a red grape variety which forms the backbone of some of the finest wines from Spain and Portugal. It has also been successfully adopted in the New World, especially in California, Argentina and Australia. In 2020, Tempranillo was the third most planted grape variety in the world. The most searched-for Tempranillo wine on our list is Vega Sicilia Unico Gran Reserva.

Tempranillo has strong roots in Spain where it translates to "little early one", a name given to it by growers who observed its habit of ripening earlier than Garnacha (Grenache), its traditional Spanish blending partner and a majority of most other Spanish red grape varieties. Almost every red wine from Rioja and Ribera del Duero has Tempranillo at its core.

Garnet red color with bluish reflections, clean and bright.

It is a complex wine where we can appreciate sweet red and black fruit, spicy notes of cloves, black pepper and some sweet vanilla. When the wine opens, aromas of balsamic, toasted and some hint of undergrowth flow through.

SYRAH

THE PROFILE OF SYRAH

Syrah is a dark-skinned red wine grape. Its origins have been popularly debated, but its modern viticultural home is unquestionably the northern Rhône Valley of eastern France. In Australia, Syrah is the flagship variety and has developed such a distinct personality that it is essentially regarded as a distinct variety, is overwhelmingly (but not exclusively) known as Shiraz. Syrah has proved successful around the world; wines are produced in many styles and display myriad dark-fruit flavors. Varietal Syrah can be quite floral in its youth, developing white and black pepper aromas and herbaceous notes as it ages. Some examples show tanned leather and smoky scents, while the fruit in these wines tends towards the very dark flavors of blackcurrant and licorice.

Syrah is also an extremely useful blending grape due to its deep color and typically high tannins. In the southern Rhône it is common for Syrah to be blended with any combination of Grenache, Mourvèdre,

CHIANTI

THE PROFILE OF CHIANTI

Chianti is not the name of a grape but of a wine-producing region in Tuscany, Italy. The main grape used to make Chianti wine is called Sangiovese. It derives its name from the Latin 'sanguis jovis' which means the blood of Jove or Jupiter.

Sangiovese is an indigenous Italian grape variety and by far the most widely planted red grape in Italy.

By law a wine can only be called Chianti if it is a) produced in the Chianti region and b) made with at least 80 percent Sangiovese grapes.

Most Chiantis are made with 100 percent Sangiovese. However, some producers blend in other varieties such as a little Merlot or Syrah. Or, Cabernet Sauvignon along with the Sangiovese to help soften down the final product.

BOBAL

THE PROFILE OF BOBAL

The name (pronounced 'bow-bal') comes from the Latin, 'bovale' meaning 'in the shape of a bull's head'. This reflects the fact that the Bobal grape cluster is tightly packed in a very distinctive shape, which could indeed be said to look similar to a bovine head.

Bobal is a child of the Levant, its homestead the western Mediterranean DOs of Ribera del Júcar, Manchuela and, most significantly, Utiel-Requena, where it flourishes on hillsides of up to 900m, located 70km inland from the sea. The altitude of this DO makes it the coolest of the Levant regions and lends a structure to its wines, which is well suited to this globally warming world.

CHARDONNAY

THE PROFILE OF CHARDONNAY

Chardonnay is the world's most famous white-wine grape and also one of the most widely planted. Although the most highly regarded expressions of the variety are those from Burgundy and California, many high-quality examples are made in Italy, Australia, New Zealand and parts of South America.

Describing the flavors of Chardonnay is not easy. While many Chardonnay wines have high aromatic complexity, this is usually due to winemaking techniques (particularly the use of oak) rather than the variety's intrinsic qualities. Malolactic fermentation gives distinctive buttery aromas. Fermentation and/or maturation in oak barrels contributes notes of vanilla, smoke and hints of sweet spices such as clove and cinnamon. Extended lees contact while in barrel imparts biscuity, doughy flavors. Because of this high level of winemaker involvement, Chardonnay has become known as the "winemaker's wine".

ALBARINO

THE PROFILE OF ALBARINO

Albariño (Alvarinho) is a green-skinned grape variety native to Galicia on the north Atlantic coast of Spain. It is best known as being the key grape variety in the Rias Baixas DO, where it makes crisp but often well-textured white wines with peach, citrus and mineral characters that pair perfectly with the local seafood.

The variety is often made into a lightly sparkling Vinho Verde wine in Portugal, which is commonly labeled varietally to distinguish it from the usual Louriero-based Vinho Verde blend. Here, the variety is known as Alvarinho.

The variety is high in acidity, and can be produced as a light white wine or in a fuller style, with oak or lees aging adding to the texture and richness. A marine characteristic from the nearby Atlantic ocean is often discernible, sometimes manifesting itself as a slight salinity, which makes Albarino a perfect food wine.

GARNACHA BLANCA

THE PROFILE OF GARNACHA BLANCA

Grenache Blanc (Garnacha Blanca in Spain) is the light-skinned mutation of Grenache Noir. Although it is native to northeastern Spain, Grenache Blanc is best known for its role in southern French white wines and in particular as a member of the Châteauneuf-du-Pape blend. The light-golden, straw-colored juice of Grenache Blanc is increasingly produced as a varietal wine, though its use as a softener in a blend is still more common. It typically displays green-apple and stonefruit aromas and a broad texture.

SAUVIGNON BLANC

THE PROFILE OF SAUVIGNON BLANC

Sauvignon Blanc is a white-wine grape from western France, now successfully grown in emerging and established wine regions all over the world. While the grape may be more readily associated with the Loire Valley (for its pivotal role in Sancerre and Pouilly-Fumé), it is more likely to have originated from Bordeaux, where it is typically blended with Semillon.

In the late 20th Century, a new region began to gain a reputation as one of the great Sauvignon Blanc regions of the world: Marlborough, at the northern tip of New Zealand's South Island. The rapid development of the Marlborough Sauvignon Blanc is one of the most dramatic events in the world of wine.

The key selling point of Sauvignon Blanc is its straightforwardness – the flavors are rarely hidden away in the background. Also, there is a particularly close correlation between the perceived flavors and their descriptors, making Sauvignon Blanc an ideal wine with which to begin wine-tasting lessons.

NEW TAUS BLANCO · HACIENDA DEL CARCHE (JUMILLA, SPAIN)

BARON DE LEY SEMIDULCE 100% Sauvignon Blanc

The pressing and maceration of the grapes are carried out at low temperature so that the fermentation is carried out in cold. The fermentation stops with a drop in temperature in order to eliminate the yeasts and thus obtain the residual sugar that characterizes semi-sweet wines.

View: Clean, bright and transparent straw yellow wine with golden trim.

Nose: Clean and complex aromas of passion fruit, mint and notes of honey.

Mouth: With an excellent balance between acidity, alcohol and sugar, the palate is fresh with a slight plum feel.

RIESLING

THE PROFILE OF RIESLING

Riesling is a light-skinned, aromatic grape of German origin which is – if the majority of top wine critics are to be believed – the world's finest white wine grape variety.

For many, the claim above may seem at odds with the sea of chaptalized, low-quality wine exported from Germany in the late 20th Century. In truth, very little of that infamous wine was Riesling at all, but instead higher-yielding grapes such as Müller-Thurgau and Silvaner), but the reputation has nonetheless stuck. Riesling has also been stereotyped as just a sweet grape, used only to make sticky wines. But while botrytized Rieslings are among the finest sweet wines in the world, the majority of global Riesling wines are either dry or off-dry.

GODELLO

THE PROFILE OF GODELLO

Godello is a white grape variety grown in both Spain and Portugal and is thought to originate in Galicia in the northwestern corner of Spain.

The history of Godello is somewhat unclear. The first official written reference to it came in 1531 when it was cited under the names of Agudelho and Trincadente in the Douro. Recent DNA profiling has revealed Godello, Gouveio, Gouveio Roxo and Verdelho do Dão all share the same DNA profile.

Godello had a close brush with extinction in the 20th Century, with only a few hundred of its vines remaining by the 1970s. Thanks to a project to rescue this grape variety led by Horacio Fernández and Luis Hidalgos, there are now more than 1000 hectares (2471 acres) of Godello vines in its supposed native home of Galicia.

VERDEJO

THE PROFILE OF VERDEJO

Verdejo is the aromatic grape variety behind the crisp white wines of Rueda in central Spain. It is by far the most planted variety in this part of the country, and is produced both varietally and as a component of a blend with either Viura or Sauvignon Blanc

Full-bodied Verdejo wines are held in high regard, displaying herbaceous, nutty characters with balanced acidity and some cellaring potential. Nevertheless its prominence in Rueda is being challenged by the international Sauvignon Blanc. Furthermore, Chardonnay and Viognier were added to the DO regulations in 2020.

Before this a generic Rueda DO still white wine had to feature at least 50 percent Verdejo. Now it must include the same minimum of Verdejo OR Sauvignon Blanc. Rueda Verdejo is no longer a separate classification. Verdejo remains the key grape variety in the region's sparkling wines, which are known as Rueda Espumoso, and the less common fortified wines.

MOSCATEL

THE PROFILE OF MOSCATEL

Muscat (Moscato in Italy, Moscatel in Spain and Portugal) is the name of one of the oldest and most widespread grape families in the world. The grapes we know today as Muscat – which are believed to have originated in the Middle East – have been used in winemaking since the times of the ancient Greeks.

The distinctive grapey aroma of Muscat is one of its chief properties, but its versatility also makes it an attractive option for winemakers. Muscat may be produced as dry, medium, sweet, sparkling or even dessert wine, and are also used as table grapes around the world – this is why we particularly describe Muscat wine as being "grapey". However, the Muscat family in general has low acidity and is not suited to aging more than about four years (with the exception of fortified Muscat).

BOBAL

THE PROFILE OF BOBAL

The name (pronounced 'bow-bal') comes from the Latin, 'bovale' meaning 'in the shape of a bull's head'. This reflects the fact that the Bobal grape cluster is tightly packed in a very distinctive shape, which could indeed be said to look similar to a bovine head.

Bobal is a child of the Levant, its homestead the western Mediterranean DOs of Ribera del Júcar, Manchuela and, most significantly, Utiel-Requena, where it flourishes on hillsides of up to 900m, located 70km inland from the sea. The altitude of this DO makes it the coolest of the Levant regions and lends a structure to its wines, which is well suited to this globally warming world.
